WORK IN PROGRESS

Joint article (with James F. Powers), "Justice, Conflict, and Dispute Resolution in Monastic and Secular Romanesque Art: The Ecclesiastical Message in Spain," under review.

I am currently researching late medieval diplomatic activity involving England and the Iberian world, focusing on the influences of marriage, gender, and New World exploration.

Part of that research into the gendering of diplomatic history is taking the form of an article on Princess Isabel of Portugal's participation in international diplomacy and peacekeeping operations, 1439-43. Given that I have already published on a parallel topic ("The Changes of Fortune – Gender, Patronage and Diplomacy in the Early Career of Margaret of Austria (1480-1530)," Mediterranean Studies, 20 (2012), 3-27), I am considering the viability of publishing the gender topics separate from the overall history of Anglo-Iberian diplomacy.
